Kareela Public School wins national prize in cartridge recycling competition

Kareela Public School has won the national prize for the 'Cartridges 4 Planet Ark' and Officeworks Schools Competition, receiving an eWood Garden Bed made from recycled printer cartridges worth $1,000 and a $300 gift voucher from Bunnings for soil and plants.

Planet Ark and Officeworks will present the prize in the schools grounds where the garden bed has been installed on Friday 7th August.

Kareela Public School was judged by Officeworks and Planet Ark to be the winner with the best answer to the question: 'Why is it important for your school to recycle printer cartridges?'

The students' winning entry to the competition explained that the school recycles all allowable components from its networked printers and photocopiers, including cartridges, because the staff and students know that the chemicals contained within them are potentially hazardous to the environment.

"As a school community, we place a high value on recycling," said School Principal David O'Connell, on behalf of the students. "We know reducing the amount of electronic waste that currently goes into landfill is important as it is the fastest growing form of generated waste. The ability to recover materials used in cartridges is also a great way to reduce our impact on the environment."

The 'Cartridges 4 Planet Ark' program is one of the longest-running examples of an extended producer program in Australia.

Printer cartridges collected through the program are sorted and, depending on their condition, returned to the manufacturer for reuse or dismantled, with plastics, metals, toner and ink collected and refined for recycling. They are turned into a wide range of items including commodities like aluminium, ferrous metal, stainless steel and over six different plastic types, as well as new products like cartridges, pens, rulers, asphalt additives, and eWood™.

Officeworks has been proudly involved with the 'Cartridges 4 Planet Ark' program since 2003 and is the largest collector of printer cartridges for recycling in Australia having collected over 5 million cartridges through its retail network across the country.

If they are sent to landfill, printer cartridges can take between 450 to 1000 years to break down, which is why Planet Ark and Officeworks are calling on everyone to recycle their printer cartridges responsibly. Over 27 million cartridges, equivalent to 12,000 tonnes of plastics, metals, inks and toners, have been recycled since the program began in 2003.

"We ran the schools competition, supported by Officeworks, to help teach students the benefits of recycling," said Ryan Collins, Recycling Programs Manager at Planet Ark.

The 'Cartridges 4 Planet Ark' program is made possible though the ongoing support of the Participating Manufacturers - Brother, Canon, Epson, Konica Minolta, Oce and Kyocera.
